Patricia George—Teaches flute at BYU–Idaho, Sewanee Summer Music Festival, and American Band College. Consulting editor of Flute Talk; writes monthly column for “The Teacher’s Studio.” Member of the National Flute Association and Flutist Quarterly editorial review board. Travels the country teaching her “Famous Flute Spa” for flute societies and universities.

Patricia George

Clark Gilbert—Married to Christine, and together they are the parents of six children. Moved to Rexburg in 2006. Previous teaching experience is in case method approaches, but now teaches and develops peer instruction courses at BYU–Idaho, overseeing the Student Peer Instruction and Activities Program. Earned BA from BYU, MA from Stanford, and doctorate from Harvard.

Clark Gilbert

Todd Hammond—A repentant lawyer, has taught in the Religion Department since 1993. Was a politician and repented of that too. Now happy with wife, Noelle, and six beautiful children. Has not repented of fishing, though opportunities are rare these days. Recently drove 10,000 miles with the family across America—loving it but having now repented permanently of it.

Todd Hammond

Steve Hunsaker—Teaches in the Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures since 2001. Received BA from BYU, MA from the University of California at Riverside, and PhD from Pennsylvania State University. Chairs the Faculty Development Committee. He and wife, Susan, have five children. Came to Rexburg from Kansas to get away from wind and cold winters.

Steve Hunsaker

Wade Huntsman

Wade Huntsman—Joined the Department of Art in 2004. Received BFA from Art Center College of Design, and MEd from American Continental University. Worked nine years for Dreamworks Studios in Los Angeles. Married to Mary Jo; they have three children. Enjoys the shift from commercial production to teaching—and the out-of-doors.

Casey Hurley

Casey Hurley—Grew up in Idaho Falls, studied in North Carolina, and spent three years practicing law in Portland, Oregon. Married Matt a month before coming to BYU–Idaho. Now, five years later, expecting their first child (a son) for Christmas. Spends free time bicycling, cooking (eating), hiking, refinishing furniture, playing piano, and decorating the new nursery.

David Johnson

David Johnson—Grew up north of Chicago, Illinois. Received BS in mechanical engineering from BYU, MS and PhD in engineering mechanics from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University. Married to his one and only and enjoys putting the kids to bed, the little ones, at least. Occasionally enjoys woodworking; usually enjoys photography.

Ryan Nielsen

Ryan Nielsen—Began at BYU–Idaho in 2006, teaching trumpet and jazz. Married to Holly Parson of Rexburg, and together they have two children, Brian and Sara. Holds BA in music education from BYU–Idaho, and an MA in trumpet performance from Arizona State University. Loves reading American history, world religions, jazz, and church history.

Anne Papworth

Anne Papworth—A Rexburg native and Ricks College graduate. After living in California, Arizona, New York, and Washington D.C., and teaching at Ithaca College, she came home and married Jim; they have two sons. Teaches English and served as Director of Composition. Likes rediscovering hiking trails and collecting books to read sometime when there is time.

Brian Schmidt

Brian Schmidt—Married to Sarah Jacobsen; they are the parents of six children. Obtained BA from the University of Utah, MPA from BYU–Provo, and PhD from the University of Utah. Began employment at BYU–Idaho/Ricks College in 1992; currently serves as the director of Student Peer Instruction.

Brian Tonks—With wife, Nancy, has three sons, a daughter, and three grandchildren. Enjoys writing, reading astronomical developments, researching the relationship between science and religion, sports (racquetball, basketball, and football), and singing. Avoids singing in ward talent shows because he once sang John Denver’s “Follow Me” and Nancy did: “One is enough!”

Brian Tonks

Robert Worrell—Served a mission in Pennsylvania and attended Ricks College, where he met his wife, Bonnie. Majored first in art and then in English. Has worked at BYU–Idaho for 39 years, teaching art, English, humanities, and religion and serving as Art Department chair and chair of the Division of Performing and Fine Arts. Has four children and fifteen grandchildren.

Robert Worrell

Michael Young—President of the University of Utah. Graduate of BYU (BA, 1973) and Harvard Law School (JD, 1976).
