Mike Murray currently serves as the vice chairman of the Self-Reliance Services / PEF department of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. This organization provides training, tools, processes and support to help members throughout the world become spiritually and temporally self-reliant, and includes the historic Perpetual Education Fund. In 2015, nearly 250,000 members took part in training programs sponsored by Self-Reliance Services.

Since 2000, Brother Murray has been deeply involved in poverty alleviation and self-reliance related work throughout the developing world. He is the co-founder, former Chairman and current board member of Unitus, an award-winning family of related but independent entities, all focused on livelihood development through impact investing and/or grant making in the developing world. Over 50 million families are impacted through Unitus’ investments and partnerships.

Brother Murray is also the managing partner of the Crystal Springs Foundation. It was named after Crystal Springs Farm, the old dairy farm located a few miles outside of Redmond, Washington where the Murrays live. The primary mission of CSF is to help create permanent improvements in the lives of the poor and less fortunate. The foundation does this through grants and Program Related Investments. The foundation has a history of making start-up and catalytic grants and PRIs to high impact non-profits, both domestic and international.

From 2000-2015, Brother Murray served as the co-founder and advisor for Friends of the Children-Seattle. Friends of the Children-Seattle is a chapter of a nationwide organization dedicated to breaking the cycle of generational poverty through salaried, professional mentoring.

Earlier in his life, Brother Murray was a senior executive at Apple Computer and Microsoft. He attended Stanford University where he earned an engineering degree and an MBA.

He served as mission president from 2007-2010 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and is currently serving as an Area Seventy in the North America Northwest Area.

Brother Murray and his wife, Joyce, have four grown children and twelve grandchildren. They live in Redmond, Washington which is east of Seattle.
