Introduction

The goal of Political Science at BYU-Idaho is to challenge students to develop an understanding of governmental institutions and political systems. The major invites students to critically evaluate the LDS members' role in national and international politics. Majors are exposed to the different subfields and associated theories in the academic study of political science. Upon graduation, students should have a practical understanding of how each level of government functions (local, state, national, and international) as well as a solid foundation in the academic study of politics and government.

The Political Science Department offers BA degrees in Political Science with emphases in American Government and Foreign Affairs. The department also offers minors in Political Science and American Government Education. The department sponsors a chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, the National Political Science Honor Society.

American Government Emphasis

The American Government emphasis is available to students who wish to concentrate on the American political process. This includes the study of national politics including the three branches of government. State and local political institutions, public opinion, and voting behavior are also considered.

Foreign Affairs Emphasis

The Foreign Affairs emphasis is available to students who wish to concentrate on comparative and international politics. This includes the study of American and other foreign policies, international law and political economy. Different approaches to democracy and economic development are also considered.

Department Requirements

- Students must earn a C- or better in all major coursework.
- Major courses may not be used to fulfill multiple requirements (no double counting).

A Note Regarding Law School

BYU-Idaho, like many universities, does not have a specific major called "Pre-Law." This is because no specific major is required to enter law school. Students who wish to enter law school after completion of a Bachelor's Degree at BYU-Idaho are encouraged to choose Political Science or any major of interest to them. Students developing a Political Science major may choose a minor or cluster in International Studies, International Business, Economics, or other related disciplines. Please consult with one of the Political Science faculty to determine which cluster courses would be best for you.

Career Opportunities

Students should work closely with their advisor to choose an emphasis that best suits their long term goals. In addition to preparation for graduate school, students may wish to become teachers, lawyers, or serve as public officials. Others may want to become public affairs professionals in government or with major corporations. Some may choose to become reporters, campaign managers, or lobbyists. Potential international careers include working for an international intergovernmental or non-governmental organization, international law, or employment with a multi-national corporation.

4+1 Program

Select students at BYU-Idaho may work towards a graduate degree in Political Science at Idaho State University while completing their BA in Political Science at BYU-Idaho. Contact the Department for more information about this program.
